

3.1 Equalization of Opportunities for persons with Disabilities

The Act on the Equalization of Opportunities for Persons with Disabilities (short: ZIMI Act) was adopted in Slovenia in 2010, and its purpose is to prevent and eliminate discrimination against people with disabilities based on disability. The goal of this law is to create equal opportunities for disabled people in all areas of life, thereby also determining the accessibility of services, goods and facilities for public use. Such facilities, which are not yet adapted for the disabled, must therefore be restructured, access provided and barriers for the physically challenged removed.
